Message from the president

The guiding principle of the Arns Commission is the indissoluble link between the defense of democracy and the promotion of human rights. We understand that respect for the Federal Constitution and the Rule of Law is the foundation for the realization of all human rights, which encompasses individual freedoms as well as socioeconomic, political, cultural, and environmental rights.

The Arns Commission brings together members and associates with a long history of defending democracy and human rights who work voluntarily, in partnership with other democratic organizations and collectives, always adopting a strategy of dialogue and building paths agreed upon through solidarity.

Maria Victoria de Mesquita Benevides

President of the Arns Commission

Presentation

Driven by a historical obligation stemming from the fragile integration of human rights into citizens' lives and by the risks of rolling back the gains enshrined in the 1988 Federal Constitution, a group of Brazilians decided to establish the Commission for the Defense of Human Rights Dom Paulo Evaristo Arns in February 2019.

Initially formed by members from the political, legal, and academic spheres, as well as journalists and social activists from different generations, the Arns Commission has grown and now has 19 full members, 11 associate members, and 6 advisors. The group operates on a voluntary and nonpartisan basis, alongside other human rights organizations in the country.

Our goal is to raise awareness, provide support, and facilitate institutional action regarding serious violations of physical integrity, freedom, and human dignity—especially those committed by state agents, whether through action or omission, against against discriminated individuals and populations, such as Black people, Indigenous peoples, Quilombolas, LGBTQIAPN+ individuals, women, youth, and urban or rural communities living in extreme poverty.

The Arns Commission works in partnership with social organizations and individuals to identify these cases, support public complaints, refer cases to judicial bodies and international organizations, promote specific actions among political leaders, and mobilize sectors of society.

The Commission is named in honor of Cardinal Dom Paulo Evaristo Arns (1921–2016), Archbishop Emeritus of São Paulo. In 1972, Dom Paulo founded the Justice and Peace Commission of São Paulo, a historic institution dedicated to supporting victims of political and police repression in Brazil. In honoring him, the Arns Commission recognizes this example of resistance, resilience, and, above all, hope for Brazilians in difficult times.

The following are priority areas for the Arns Commission, with an emphasis on the defense of democracy as a cross-cutting theme:

Defending indigenous peoples, native peoples, and the environment

Combating racism and discrimination against the LGBTQIAPN+ community

Promoting best practices in public security and combating police violence

Defending the right to memory and truth

Defending the rights of people experiencing homelessness

Governance

Under the presidency of sociologist Maria Victoria Benevides and the vice presidency of historian Luiz Felipe de Alencastro, the Arns Commission underwent a restructuring in 2025. New members were admitted, the Advisory Board was established, new financial partnerships were secured, and a new communications team was hired.

About us

The Arns Commission was founded on a commitment to prioritize the most vulnerable groups in society—women, Black people, youth, Indigenous peoples, Quilombolas, and LGBTQIAPN+ individuals—who continue to bear the brunt of inequality in Brazil. We are a civil society organization composed of legal professionals, intellectuals, journalists, and human rights activists. We operate on a volunteer basis and are nonpartisan.

Mission

Our mission is to receive, report, and monitor cases of serious violations of physical integrity, freedom, and human dignity, especially those committed by State agents. We also work to raise awareness of such cases and provide them with legal representation at both the national and international levels. We work in a network with other human rights organizations, supporting their initiatives and joining forces to contribute to a country where justice and democracy prevail.
